Common Questions This Guide Answers 1. How do I know if I'm a suitable candidate for face lift surgery? → Only a qualified Me Clinic practitioner can determine candidacy through an individual clinical assessment — online checklists are not sufficient. 2. How long does recovery take after a face lift? → Recovery timelines are personalised per patient based on procedure type, individual health, and surgery extent — Me Clinic does not publish generalised figures. 3. What is the first step to exploring face lift surgery at Me Clinic? → Book a consultation with a qualified Me Clinic practitioner; initial questions are welcomed without obligation or pressure to proceed.

Me Clinic face lift surgery: your complete guide

Choosing to explore face lift surgery is a deeply personal decision, and it deserves honest guidance rather than glossy reassurances. Me Clinic has spent over 35 years helping patients feel confident in their own skin, and this guide reflects that same commitment — practical, straightforward, and built around what you actually need to know. From your first consultation through to recovery, the goal is simple: keep you informed, supported, and never left guessing.

The problem with generic guides

There's no shortage of face lift information online. The trouble is that most of it is generalised to the point of being unhelpful, or it doesn't reflect the specific techniques, protocols, and care standards that Me Clinic actually uses. So rather than point you toward resources that weren't written with you in mind, we've put together something more useful.

Face lift surgery is a complex medical procedure, and accurate guidance has to account for individual factors — things like surgical technique, candidate criteria, recovery protocols, contraindications, and realistic expectations. None of those topics can be handled well with a broad brush. Me Clinic's Responsible Cosmetic Surgery™ philosophy is built on the belief that informed patients make better decisions, and that starts with honest communication from people who are genuinely invested in your outcome.

Why a personalised consultation matters

Face lift surgery isn't the same procedure for every patient. Skin laxity, bone structure, age, health history, and your personal goals all shape which surgical approach makes sense for you — and what results you can realistically expect.

Every prospective patient at Me Clinic starts with a thorough, unhurried consultation. This is a clinical assessment, not a sales conversation. During that appointment, you can expect a careful evaluation of whether you're a suitable candidate, an honest discussion of realistic outcomes, a clear explanation of the risks involved and how the team works to manage them, and as much time as you need to ask questions and get straight answers.

No responsible provider can give you accurate, specific guidance without that consultation. At Me Clinic, that's not a policy — it's just how good care works.

What's needed before proceeding

Clinical assessment

Every surgical plan starts with a full clinical assessment by a qualified Me Clinic practitioner. That means a thorough review of your medical history, current medications, lifestyle factors, and aesthetic goals — because understanding you as a whole person is part of caring for you properly.

Patient information and education

Me Clinic provides detailed patient information resources to help you understand the procedure, what recovery involves, and how to prepare. These materials are tailored to the specific approach recommended for you and are provided as part of the consultation process, not as an afterthought.

Safety and contraindication review

Not everyone is a suitable candidate for face lift surgery, and the clinical team will carefully review any contraindications or factors that might affect your eligibility or the timing of your procedure. Patient safety isn't negotiable.

Post-operative care protocols

Recovery from face lift surgery requires structured, attentive aftercare. Me Clinic's post-operative protocols are designed to support healing and reduce complications, and your care team will walk you through every detail before your procedure — so you know exactly what to expect and when.

Frequently asked questions about getting started

How do I find out if I'm a suitable candidate?

Through a consultation with a qualified Me Clinic practitioner. Online checklists, however well-intentioned, can't substitute for a proper clinical assessment conducted by someone who can evaluate your individual needs in person.

Can I get pricing information before a consultation?

Me Clinic is committed to full pricing transparency, and costs will be discussed clearly during your consultation — no hidden fees, no surprises. That said, accurate pricing depends on the specific approach recommended for your case, which is why it's discussed individually rather than published as a flat figure.

What if I'm not ready to commit — can I still ask questions?

Yes, and you're encouraged to. There's no obligation to proceed after a consultation. The point is simply to make sure you feel fully informed and confident in whatever direction you choose, at whatever pace suits you.

How long does recovery take?

It depends on the procedure, your individual health and healing capacity, and the extent of the surgery. Your Me Clinic practitioner will give you a personalised recovery timeline as part of your pre-operative planning, because a generic figure wouldn't actually tell you much about your own experience.

What are the risks?

All surgical procedures carry risks, and Me Clinic will always be upfront about them. The clinical team will discuss the specific risks relevant to your procedure and your health profile during your consultation. General risk information is a useful starting point, but it has to be understood in the context of your individual circumstances — and that conversation happens in person.

Me Clinic's commitment to clinical integrity

Me Clinic's reputation over 35 years hasn't been built on bold claims or polished marketing. It's been built on patient trust — which means saying what's true, not what sounds impressive.

Me Clinic doesn't publish generalised procedural timelines, recovery statistics, or outcome data that hasn't been validated within its specific clinical environment and patient population. In a market where exaggerated claims and misleading before-and-after imagery are common, that restraint is deliberate. The Responsible Cosmetic Surgery™ philosophy isn't a tagline — it's the standard every team member works to every day.

When you choose Me Clinic, you can expect:

- Transparency — clear, honest information at every stage, with nothing glossed over - Clinical rigour — recommendations grounded in careful assessment, not sales targets - Personalised care — a treatment plan built around your specific needs and goals - Ongoing support — a care team available before, during, and long after your procedure

Next steps

If you're considering face lift surgery and want to explore your options, the most useful next step is booking a consultation. That's where your journey actually begins — with a qualified clinician, honest guidance, and a plan built around you.

Reach out to Me Clinic directly. The team is ready to answer your initial questions without pressure and to help you schedule a consultation at a time that works for you.

This guide reflects Me Clinic's commitment to honest, patient-centred communication and the Responsible Cosmetic Surgery™ philosophy. Specific procedural details, pricing, recovery timelines, and clinical recommendations are provided individually during consultation and can't responsibly be generalised across all patients.

Related Products & Brand Context

This page presents before-and-after patient results for facelift procedures performed at Me Clinic, an Australian cosmetic surgery provider operating through meclinic.com.au. Within the knowledge graph, the product sits inside the category hierarchy Healthcare & Medical Services > Cosmetic Surgery Services > Face Lift Surgery, placing it firmly within clinical cosmetic surgery rather than non-surgical or skincare categories.

The linked entity describes two distinct surgical approaches documented in the patient results: the Deep Plane Facelift and the SMAS Facelift. These are not separate products but rather technique variants within the same Face Lift Surgery offering at Me Clinic. The Deep Plane Facelift works at a deeper anatomical layer than the SMAS (Superficial Musculo-Aponeurotic System) technique, which repositions the underlying facial muscle and tissue layer. A prospective patient viewing this before-and-after gallery would typically use it to evaluate which technique aligns with their own goals and anatomy before consulting a surgeon.

Because the knowledge graph context returned no sibling product records, it is not possible to confirm which other facial or body surgical procedures Me Clinic offers alongside this one. No additional product names from the same brand are available in the current data to reference here.

From a use-case adjacency perspective, someone researching facelift outcomes would commonly also look at related facial surgical services — such as brow lifts, eyelid surgery (blepharoplasty), or neck lifts — as these procedures are frequently combined with a facelift to address the full facial profile. However, none of those are explicitly listed in the supplied entity data, so they cannot be confirmed as part of Me Clinic's current range. If you are comparing options, the Me Clinic website at meclinic.com.au is the authoritative source for their full procedure catalogue and surgeon credentials.
